'A Giant Leap for Our Little Learners'

INFINITY Science Center unveils its newest children's program

INFINITY Science Center on Wednesday hosted a ribbon cutting for its newest amenity, the Little Learner's Lab, an "exploration lab made for children from birth through five years old."

"This room will provide a hands-on experience for our littlest learners and will engage families in exploring and experiencing STEM," INFINITY's Education Manager Donna Torres said. "After several years of planning and praying, it is wonderful to say The Little Learners Lab is open at INFINITY."

The lab was made possible by donations from Walt Disney Imagineering, Chemours, and Hancock County Excel by 5, Torres said.

Joan Seals, Excel by 5 Certification Manager, presented a $500 check during Wednesday's event.

Torres said the funds will be used to provide science-themed age-appropriate literature for the Little Learner's library.

"As we know, if we want to go to the moon, we first have to go through Hancock County, Mississippi," Torres said. "Jason Peck with Red Door Studios has captured the swamp to space theme through his artwork for the Little Learner's Lab which makes this lab inviting and engaging. To everyone who has believed in and supported this project I would like to say thank you."

Seals said that it was a "great day for little learners."

She added that Excel by 5's focus is the youngest learners.

"We know that learning begins at birth and we recognize the importance of reading and talking with children and having conversations and starting the exploration of learning with them," Seals said. "Excel by 5 recognizes that INFINITY has made a giant leap for our little learners today."

Peck and his daughter Ember attended the ribbon cutting. He said it took him several months to paint the murals in the room.

"It's awesome seeing it all together," he said.

Veronica Marsh attended the event on Wednesday and brought along her 15-month-old son, Charles.

"It's great that they're doing something for the younger kids around here," she said. "We will definitely be back."

PRVO, Inc. tells supers it plans to bid on Bay-Waveland Head Start program

BY CASSANDRA FAVRE
STAFF WRITER

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors on Monday heard from Helmon Johnson, executive director of Pearl River Valley Opportunity, Inc., who was seeking the county's endorsement for the PRVO's upcoming intent to bid for the Bay-Waveland Head Start program.

Johnson said that the PRVO has provided services in Hancock County for the past four years.

The PRVO is 501(c)(3) organization and has been in operation since 1965, he said, and serves low income people and businesses.

Johnson said PRVO offers a low-income energy assistance program, which provides help for people, with a concentration on the elderly, for energy bills and mortgage problems.

"Our program started back in '65 with five employees and a budget of $30,000," he said. "Today, to tell you how we have done, we have 450 employees in the 15-county area that we work with and our annual budget is around $25 million a year."

Johnson said that the Head Start program that operates in Hancock County is up for bid.

Johnson said that the PRVO operates an "efficient" Head Start system.

"What we're going to be asking for is an endorsement from the board for us to apply for the operation of the Head Start program in Hancock County," Johnson said. "And that's all it costs you, you don't put any money up. We just want it to be operated locally and we're local."

Sherrone McDonald, the PRVO's Head Start/Early Head Start director, spoke to the board about how the program operates.

"We have about 793 infants, toddlers, and preschoolers right now that we're serving in six counties in about 24 locations," she said. "We do have experience in this area, high-quality early childhood services to include dental/education health and parent services. We're proposing to serve 60 additional preschoolers in Hancock County as well as 24 infants and toddlers and eight pregnant moms. So we really start before birth with those pregnant moms, getting them prepared and educated so that when their children transition to kindergarten, they will be school-ready."

McDonald then showed a short video about the PRVO's Head Start program, which included testimonials from parents.

Johnson said the PRVO is also applying for the Head Start program in Pearl River County, which he said the PRC Board of Supervisors endorsed last week.

He added that the application is due Nov. 12.

"We would just like you to look at it and look at us and if you want to call some other counties that we operate in and look at some of the books and our annual report," he said.

Johnson said that the PRVO also works with local public school systems.

McDonald said the PRVO's Head Start teachers have bachelor's degrees in early childhood education.

The board approved a motion to approve a letter of support contingent upon

La. man jailed for allegedly molesting child at Waveland pier

Police: Suspect first met boy on social media app

Waveland police last week arrested a Louisiana man for allegedly molesting a child at a public pier.

Travis Shawn Bush, 38, of Bogalusa, "was arrested on warrants issued from the Waveland Police Department for Sexual Battery and Touching a Child for Lustful Purposes/Molestation," Waveland Police Chief Mike Prendergast said in a press release Tuesday. "These charges stemmed from an incident which occurred at the Garfield-Ladner Pier involving a teenage boy, whom Bush had met on a social media app. The warrants had been signed by Waveland City Judge PJ Mauffray."

Bush was initially arrested in Bogalusa on Wednesday, Oct. 30, Prendergast said, but "waived indictment in Louisiana and was transported back to Hancock County on Nov. 1 and booked into the Hancock County Jail."

According to jail records, the offense

Bay St. Louis Little Theatre will Present ‘Road to Mecca’ Nov. 15

SEA COAST ECHO

The Bay St. Louis Little Theatre presents its second show of the season “Road to Mecca” by Athol Fugard on November 15th. It is based on the life of Helen Martins, the artist whose home was established as one of the highest attended museums in her country. The play was adapted to a movie starring Kathy Bates and the author himself.

The play won the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for Best Foreign Play. "Glow with a rare luminosity and intensity. Athol Fugard's latest play...is also his most eloquent and transforming." - The Christian Science Monitor. "One of Fugard's simplest, most beautiful plays." - The New York Daily News . “A powerful production that makes you catch your breath.” – The New York Times.

This is an unusual drama about Miss Helen, an old Boer woman who lives alone in the South African boondocks. Helen found a new world for herself when most people are slowing down their life. She started creating sculptures which she calls her Mecca. A young woman who was once helped by Miss Helen has traveled hundreds of miles to help her in a time of crisis Miss Helen is in danger of being sent to an old folks' home by a narrow minded minister who considers her sculptures a public nuisance.

A penetrating study of the role of the artist in any society, this important play was produced in London and New York to great critical acclaim.

The show is directed and produced by Cheryl Grace. Jen Coulter is assistant director. The cast includes Cheryl Grace, Jen Coulter, and Paul Bernard. Jen Coulter did set design and construction. Volunteer coordinator is Rachel Anderson. Sound effects and promotion are done by Clayton Pennylegion.

Health Officials: Policy in Place to Now Allow Dogs on Restaurant Patios

SEA COAST ECHO

Beginning Friday, November 1, 2019, a new Mississippi State Department of Health (MSDH) policy will allow restaurant patrons to dine with their pet dogs under certain conditions.

Patterned after other states', the policy outlines the requirements that food facilities and dog owners must meet in order to ensure that the health and safety of the public is not compromised.

"MSDH wants to support local businesses in their efforts to best accommodate their clientele. We've looked at other southern states – including Georgia, Tennessee and South Carolina – and have modeled our policy after theirs," said Jim Craig, MSDH Senior Deputy and Director of Health Protection. "We assessed the health risks and identified the types of outdoor dining settings that would present low, minimal or no risk to the public."

Under the new policy, the restaurant must have a separate outside entrance into a designated outdoor dog-friendly area that includes proper signage defining the area. Pet dogs are not permitted to travel through indoor or non-designated outdoor portions of the restaurant. Service dogs are allowed indoors in customer areas. Disposable dishes and utensils are required in the dog-friendly area and pet dogs must not come into contact with serving dishes, utensils, tableware, linens or any other items involved in food service operations. Patrons are always required to keep their dogs on leash and under control and restaurant employees may not touch or handle the pet dog.

"If the restaurant agrees to the policy and requirements are met, it can apply for a variance to the MSDH Food Code to allow pet dogs. Once we review the application and receive the $165 inspection fee, we will inspect the facility to ensure the designated area meets food safety requirements. The restaurant will be inspected at least twice a year if granted the dog-friendly variance," said Craig.

The restaurant or food facility can deny service if the pet owner fails to exercise reasonable control over the pet dog, or if it behaves in a manner that compromises the health or safety of any person in the restaurant. Additionally, failure to comply with the policy could result in a lower inspection grade for the facility as well as a revocation of the dog-friendly variance.

"It's important for restaurants planning to provide this option to first check with local and county ordinances to ensure that dog-friendly restaurants are not otherwise prohibited in their area," said Craig. "We look forward to working with any restaurant interested in adopting this new policy at its facility. There is no reason why we can't adapt to the changing landscape of restaurant trends. We just need to make sure that the steps are in place to properly do so."

To read the details of the new policy or to download a variance application to allow dogs at your restaurant, visit HealthyMS.com/doggiedining.

Don't take it for granted

There are so many moments in life that I think we take for granted.

It can be as simple as planning a family dinner, vacation, or a quick trip to the grocery store.

For someone living with a chronic illness, it becomes a monumental task to plan almost anything.

For more than six years, our family had to make plans about my dad's dialysis schedule.

Not only did treatments last four hours a day, three times a week, they also took a lot of his energy.

He would mostly want to nap after dialysis, which left room for very little activity.

If he wanted to take a trip out of town, he would have to coordinate with another dialysis center in the destination city so that he could still have his life-sustaining treatments.

One of his dialysis days was on Saturday, which is usually a good time to plan a family event, attend a festival, or take a trip out of town.

Last week, my parents and I took a trip to Texas to visit my sister and nephew.

On Saturday, for the first time in more than six years, we were able to plan a family fun day at the Kemah Boardwalk in Kemah, Texas.

We didn't have to worry about getting Daddy back to have dialysis, nor did we have to wait the four hours it would often take.

The Kemah Boardwalk is a nice little spot located along the water.

There are rides, shops, restaurants, and much more.

My nephew, who also shares my love of fast rides, was excited about the day.

Which means he basically took me on every ride several times.

Even the ferris wheel, which I'm not a fan of. But when we were at the top, my nephew proclaimed the view to be "beautiful."

What was even more beautiful was not only witnessing my nephew's enjoyment, but also my parents, especially my dad.

I don't think the smile ever left his face as he watched his grandson enjoy himself on the rides and the other events of the day.

We dined at a restaurant named Aquarium, which provided an underwater dining experience.

All in all, it was a neat place to visit and one of the best days I've had in a long time.

I'm not saying that people who live with chronic illnesses can't have fun and still enjoy life. They most definitely can. It just takes a little more planning.

We still had lots of good times while Daddy was on dialysis.

But now, post-transplant, we don't have to plan as much.

I hope Daddy's story can bring hope to those who are still on dialysis or anyone who suffers from an illness.

Andrew Jackson and the Winds of War

General Andrew Jackson was a great hero in American and Hancock County history.

The War of 1812 began on June 1, 1812, when the United States declared war against Great Britain. British strategy targeted the port of New Orleans because it was the gateway to the heart of the American West.

Indeed the British questioned the legitimacy of the Louisiana Purchase of 1803 and, moreover, intended for New Orleans to become a prize of war. Although the Battle of New Orleans on January 8, 1815, dashed Britain's hope of capturing New Orleans, earlier military engagements by Jackson's army executed against the Creek Indians and the ports of Mobile, Pensacola, and Bay St. Louis had already sealed their fate.

Hancock County and its citizens were right in the middle of the preparations and execution of the several stages of battle, both naval and land. The U.S. Navy and Purser Thomas Shields played

HANCOCK HISTORY
by James Keating MD

key roles in this drama.

This article will describe the trap that the British were forced into by the events in the fall of 1814. In December of 1812, President James Madison through his Secretary of War, William Eustis, ordered Tennessee military General Andrew Jackson to assemble an army of two thousand volunteers and proceed to Natchez, Mississippi.

Thirty boats carried troops to Natchez in five weeks. The British were expected to attack New Orleans in 1812. However in March of 1812, Jackson was ordered by a new

Secretary of War, General John Armstrong, to return to Nashville.

For several decades British agents had been providing the Five Civilized Tribes of the West (Cherokee, Chickasaw, Choctaw, Creek, and Seminole) weapons such as rifles. Additionally the Creek Indians were promised land if they would be their allies and attack American settlers on the frontier. In fact a bounty for scalps was a common practice.

The British envisioned a joint military engagement with the Creek Indians to take New Orleans and other strategic Gulf Coast targets. On August 30, 1813, Creek Indian Chief Red Eagle (aka William Weatherford) lead a large band of Creek warriors to a crude stockade called Fort Mims, which was near the Alabama River in the Mississippi Territory. Accordingly three hundred settlers were slaughtered.

Thus began the Creek War of 1813. As a result President Madison and Tennessee Governor

Willie Blount ordered General Jackson to reassemble his volunteer army division of two thousand soldiers and neutralize this Creek Indian threat.

In November 1813 Jackson engaged a large force of approximately one thousand Creek warriors at the Indian settlement of Talladega. Employing a classic pincer tactic, he placed eight hundred cavalry soldiers in two winged formations adjacent to a central division of twelve hundred infantry soldiers to repel the attack of the opposing Creek army.

This maneuver broke the back of the Creek attack and killed three hundred braves. The remaining seven hundred warriors successfully escaped into the forest. In short this inexperienced General Jackson had successfully masterminded his first major battle. Jackson maintained his army in the northern Mississippi Territory during the winter of 1814.

Records Key to Successful Outing

During the past several weeks, we have witnessed the warmer temperatures of summer change to fall-like temperatures. Since fall is in full swing, wildlife enthusiasts throughout Mississippi will be engaged in new activities...hiking, fall fishing, and squirrel and deer hunting!

Mississippi's hikers, anglers, and hunters are spending many hours in the woods and on the water this time of year. If you are one of them, you may want to consider keeping a logbook of your time spent outdoors. Some of the most productive anglers and hunters I know keep accurate and detailed records of their trips. I firmly believe that this record keeping is a big part of what makes them so successful.

Logbooks can be extremely helpful to you in the coming years. You will be able to look back

Conservation Corner
by James L. Cummins

through your book to examine successful trips to find out what made them so successful.

When beginning your logbook, enter as much data as possible about each outing. Many years from now, you may not be able to remember a certain hike or certain hunting or fishing trip, but if you have taken the time to record detailed information about that trip as it took place, you will have everything you need in black and white.

When compiling data from an outing, you will need to record all pertinent information about that outing. Things such as date, time, weather conditions, river stages, areas where you saw wildlife and/or caught fish, areas where you did not see wildlife and/or catch fish, depths which were productive, baits and lures that were productive (including sizes, types and colors), species of fish which were caught, and who you were fishing or hunting with. All of this information will be valuable in the future.

You should develop your own system of recording this data. A system that is personally tailored will serve you best. After all, if you cannot interpret what you have written, your records will be virtually useless to you.

Keep in mind that logbooks can be used for all sorts of outdoor activities. Squirrel and deer hunters would be well served by keeping a detailed log. We have all hunted certain areas that, during certain times of the season, are more productive than others. Some of these areas you may have hunted for the first time and you want to make sure you will be able to find the area again in the future. Keep a record of it and you will!

Keeping a logbook of all your outdoor activities will enable you to be a more successful hunter, angler, or wildlife viewer whether you are in the field or on the water.

Mississippi Ranks No. 1 in Nation for Score Gains on National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP)

Mississippi Scores Increase as National Scores Stagnate

SEA COAST ECHO

Mississippi has achieved the No. 1 spot in the nation for gains on the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP), also known as the Nation's Report Card, with 4th grade students making the largest score gains from 2017 to 2019 in reading and mathematics, 8th grade students outpacing the nation for growth in mathematics, and 8th grade reading holding steady.

Mississippi is the only state in the nation to show significant increases in three of the four core NAEP subjects in 2019. Washington, D.C., is the only jurisdiction to show gains in three of four subjects. Nationally, scores for most NAEP subjects dropped or remained flat from 2017 to 2019.

For the first time, Mississippi 4th graders scored higher than the nation's public school average in mathematics and tied the nation in reading.

"Academic progress in Mississippi has been powerful and sustained, proving there is no limit to what our students can accomplish," said Dr. Carey Wright, state superintendent of education. "Mississippi's teachers have done a phenomenal job equipping students with the knowledge and skills to succeed throughout their education."

The percentage of Mississippi students scoring proficient or above on NAEP has increased significantly over the past decade, particularly in 4th grade mathematics, where proficiency levels nearly doubled.

"Mississippi stands out as one of just two states/jurisdictions that improved in three of the four NAEP grade and subject combinations," said Dr. Peggy Carr, associate commissioner for assessment at the National Center for Education Statistics.

"Because of its grade 4 gains, Mississippi's mathematics and reading scores are the highest they have ever been and are now on par with the national public average. This is meaningful progress for Mississippi."

The 2019 NAEP scores continue Mississippi's 10-year trend of steady increases, as the nation's scores stagnate. Student achievement accelerated more rapidly since 2013, after the statewide implementation of the Literacy-Based Promotion Act, higher academic standards with aligned assessments, a strong accountability system, and a significant investment in professional development for educators.

"A strong education system is essential to building a strong workforce and stimulating economic development," said Scott Waller, president and CEO of the Mississippi Economic Council. "Mississippi's significant progress in education is a valuable quality that sets us apart from other states."

The 2019 NAEP results show that Mississippi students living in poverty are outperforming their peers nationally. Both black and white students from low-income homes in Mississippi achieved higher scores than the national average in all four NAEP subjects. Hispanic students from low-income families outperformed their peers nationally in three of four NAEP tested subjects.

"Mississippi has entered a new era of public education," said Dr. Jason Dean, chair of the Mississippi State Board of Education. "Our significant improvements in teaching and learning have made Mississippi a national leader for improving student success in education."

Get ready for the 3rd annual Sugar Magnolia Music Festival, a two-day party in the Kiln packed with a full roster of the area's hottest blues, country, and jam bands, featuring New Orleans Grateful Dead tribute band Iko Allstars, and nationally acclaimed Rounder Records blues artist Samantha Fish headlining Saturday night.

Festival-goers will find local foods galore, an oyster bar by the Smoking Oyster, beer gardens, and an art market!

The family-friendly weekend features options for RV and camper hook-ups and primitive tent camping, with early bird pricing still available.

MDEQ Issues One Beach Water Contact Advisory in Waveland

SEA COAST ECHO

The Mississippi Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ), through its Beach Monitoring Program, issued a water contact advisory Tuesday for Station 3 (Waveland Beach). This segment of beach is not closed; however, there may be an increased risk of illness associated with swimming in this area. When water samples show that levels are safe for human contact, the advisory will be lifted.

An advisory is issued when bacteria levels exceed water quality criteria and pose an increased risk to human health. Under the Mississippi Beach Monitoring Program, water is tested for the presence of Enterococcus bacteria, which is an indicator for bacteria pollution. When an advisory is issued, water contact should be avoided.

The advisory is issued for: Station 3 -- Waveland Beach -- the extent is from Oak Blvd. east to Favre St.

Swimmers are reminded that the Beach Task Force has a standing recommendation that swimming not occur during or within 24 hours of a significant rainfall event.

Even in the darkest hours, hope does still exist. If we had given up hope, I don't think Saturday would have been the day it was.

The real reason we were able to enjoy such a special time is all thanks to Daddy's kidney donor and family.

With this gift, my Daddy can experience these moments with his family and my nephew can get to know his Paw Paw.

I know for the donor family, it is not easy to live life without their family member.

We are experiencing happy memories while it may be some time before the family can begin to feel happiness again.

That fact is not lost on me. I do hope that donor families understand the extraordinary gift they give to others. I hope it brings some small comfort.

I hope that you, if able, are registered as an organ donor. Make sure your family knows about your decision, as well.

There are so many wonderful ways that organ donation can change the lives of others. Life most definitely can go on, as my family knows.

Pirates aim for landmark victory in playoffs

BY ROB LANGRELL
PUBLISHER

The Pass Christian High School football team enjoyed its first winning season in more than a decade, posting a 7-3 mark this fall.

The Pirates still have another box to check when it comes to Friday night's state 4A playoff opener. Pass hasn't won a football playoff game in the school's history.

That could all change in a few days when the Pirates entertain Purvis, which finished the regular season with a 6-5 record. Kickoff is 7 p.m.

Pass defeated the Tornadoes back on Sept. 6 in a 39-38 thriller, and the Pirates' head coach Blake Pennock said he believes there's an edge to be found in a rematch come playoff time.

"I think there's a good advantage to it," Pennock said. "You get a chance to review film and see where we've matured and made adjustments and other areas where we need to fix some things."

"You get to understand some of the match-ups you have in the game, especially at the line of scrimmage," he added. "We were a little soft in that first game and we need to be more physical on Friday. We had a big lead Pass Christian quarterback Dustin Allison (No. 3) has thrown for 2,788 yards and 30 touchdowns this season to lead the Pirates to the state 4A playoffs.

against them in that game and then let them back in it and turned in into a barnburner."

Pass Christian's offense has gone primarily through senior quarterback Dustin Allison. He is 144 for 241 passing this season for 2,788 yards, 30 touchdowns and six interceptions. He's also run the ball 75 times for 469 yards and another eight TDs.

"Our quarterback is the key to a lot of our offense," Pennock said. "He's our triggerman and makes us go. I hope he continues that during our playoff run."

Andrew Moffett leads the Pirates in receiving with 45 catches for 1,010 yards and nine touchdowns. Teammate Kameron White had 43 catches for 896 yards and another nine TDs. In the backfield, Huu Nguyen has carried the load with 89 rushes for 621 yards and four scores.

Defensively, senior linebacker Reese Gorman leads the Pirates with 97 tackles. Fellow senior Gordon Ward has registered 85 tackles and three sacks.

That corps of Pirates have helped the team bounce back from a 1-9 campaign just a year ago. Pass made the playoffs in 2017 and '16 with identical 5-6 marks, but was bounced from the state tournament in the first round both seasons.

Pass Christian's high-powered offense is averaging 35 points per game this fall, 281 yards passing and 138 yards on the ground.

For Purvis, it will primarily keep the ball on the ground with a Wing-T offense.

Running back Ty Badon is their workhorse with 120 carries, 735 yards and six TDs this year.

The Tornadoes are expected to start sophomore Walker Flatt at quarterback. He's seen playing time as their signal-caller ever since starter Hunter Robinson was lost to a shoulder injury in mid-October.

FARM BUREAU PLAYER OF THE WEEK

St. Stanislaus set to square off against traditional powerhouse Poplarville in 4A playoff opener

BY ROB LANGRELL
PUBLISHER

St. Stanislaus' head football coach Nathan Encrapera isn't fooled by his opponent's record going into Friday's 4A playoff opener.

The Rock-A-Chaws (6-4) travel to Poplarville for a 7 p.m. kickoff, and Encrapera knows the Hornets' 5-5 record isn't an indication of weakness.

"We'll have to play physical football to have a good chance against them," he said. "They're 5-5 this year but that's not indicative of just how good they are. We'll have to play our most physical game of the season. They have some really tough linemen."

To say Poplarville has had success in the state football playoffs in recent years is putting it lightly. It has made its way at least to the South state championship game for the past three consecutive years.

The Hornets lost to Louisville 25-20 last year in the 4A championship game. In 2017, East Central beat them in the South title game. In '16, they lost to Lafayette in the state title game.

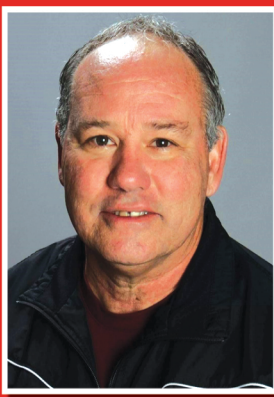

And in 2015, you ask? It was St. Stanislaus that sent Poplarville packing in the second round of the tournament by a 33-21 score.

"They run a Wing-T offense and do a great job at controlling the tempo of the game," Encrapera said. "Their coach, Jay Beech,

War

At this time the British had taken Pensacola which was in the Spanish colony/territory of Florida. To wit, the British supplied the Creeks with rifles, uniforms, and other supplies. Next Jackson attacked the Creek fortress of Horseshoe Bend on March 27, 1814, that contained one thousand warriors.

In like manner Jackson employed another pincer maneuver using two units of foot soldiers. Hence most of the Indians were killed in that siege. The Battle of Horseshoe Bend ended this Creek War.

The Treaty of Fort Jackson signed August 9, 1914, gave the United States twenty two million acres of land in the Mississippi Territory. As a consequence the Creek Nation could no longer assist the British in their projected attack of New Orleans.

On June 18, 1814, General Jackson of the Tennessee militia was promoted by President Madison to the rank of Major General of the regular U.S. Army. Two days after the signing of the Creek Indian Treaty, Jackson took his residual army of five hundred soldiers to Mobile, Alabama. Jackson believed the British would attack New Orleans from the east after the British Navy landed its army in Mobile.

Located about 150 miles east of New Orleans, Mobile had an excellent harbor with its own protected bay. Besides, the British had already landed three warships at Pensacola with a small force of men and armaments.

The United States had approximately five hundred soldiers stationed in Mobile. To aid them, Jackson requested Tennessee Governor Willie Blount to send his entire state militia consisting of General John Coffee's cavalry and friendly Cherokee warriors as well as artillery batteries, transport, and supplies. In addition, at the narrow entrance to Mobile Bay, Jackson appointed Lieutenant William Laurence to command Fort Bowyer with 160 infantry to prevent a British naval landing or invasion.

In an ensuing battle, Lieutenant Laurence successfully repelled four British men-of-war ships and a land force of seventy-two Royal Marines. After the cannons of Fort Bowyer sank the British warship Hermes the British withdrew. As a result Jackson had denied the British the port of Mobile to land any army to march on New Orleans.

The British would have to look elsewhere for their landing. Pensacola was fifty miles east of Mobile in Spanish territory. Jackson took five hundred soldiers and marched north to Fort Mims, Alabama, to meet General Coffee, and on October 25, 1814, a force of 1,800 cavalry and 750 Choctaw and Chickasaw warriors joined Jackson.

His army had grown to four thousand men. In Pensacola Bay Fort Barrancas controlled the inlet. The Spanish had handed the fort over to the British without a fight. However, Spanish Governor Don Mateo Gonzalez Manrique refused to hand over the town of Pensacola. Jackson then led a force around the back of the town at dawn while appearing to be camped peaceably to the west of the city. The Spanish and the British in their warships were caught by surprise and capitulated in short order.

For this reason the British blew up Fort Barrancas and withdrew to Jamaica on November 7, 1814. Jackson marched back to Mobile from Pensacola in three days on November 11.

On November 22 Jackson marched west toward New Orleans on the Old Federal Road. He covered three hundred miles in ten days. On November 30 Jackson and his officers were ferried across Lake Pontchartrain to New Orleans. The Federal Road ran along the 31st parallel and passed through the northern border of Hancock County (present day Pearl River County).

After reaching Hancock County, the army divided. A small portion of the army took a more southern route than General Jackson and his officers which included most of the artillery, ammunition, heavy equipment, and other supplies that had to be hauled in heavy wagons. All along the way engineers and scouts were sent ahead to prepare the trail. Quartermasters and commissary contingents rounded up food and feed for from the local farmers in the thinly settled countryside of Hancock County.

The quartermasters went to every farm in the area and bought cattle, sheep, hogs, corn, dried fruit, and other supplies. The farmers of Hancock County were happy to sell their stock because the U.S. Army offered them twice the market price for these supplies and paid with hard currency. The lower division of the army passed through Caesar on the way to Pearlington.

At that time every boat on the Pearl River was commandeered to furnish transport to New Orleans before the British arrived in Lake Borgne.

On December 9, 1814, the British armada carrying the invading army was sighted making anchorage between Cat Island and Ship Island in the Gulf of Mexico south of the Mississippi Sound.

The defense of New Orleans was going to be a joint effort of the U.S. Army and the U.S. Navy. At the New Orleans station Master Commander Daniel Todd Patterson had a flotilla of gunboats at his disposal.

These shallow draft sailing vessels (sixty feet long and eight feet wide) were well adapted to the shallow waters of Lake Borgne. A schooner, Seahorse, and a converted fishing boat, Alligator, serviced these boats. Each gunboat had a large bore cannon and several smaller guns.

The flotilla commander, Lieutenant Thomas A.P. Catsby Jones, attempted to delay the British landing. On December 13 fortytwo British shallow draft barges with twelve hundred soldiers were sent to clear Lake Borgne of the US Navy sailing vessels. Lt. Jones sent the Seahorse into the Bay of St. Louis to protect the stores of Purser Thomas Shields and discourage a landing there.

Five British barges went into the Bay and engaged the Seahorse. Simultaneously Purser Shields' battery fired on the advancing barges which were powered only by oarsmen. A naval battle occurred, and the Seahorse held off the British barges for a short time. Eventually Sailing Master William Johnson decided to set fire to the Seahorse and the supplies on shore.

A local militia company in Bay St. Louis retreated to Pearlington.

The next day the forty-two British barges captured five American gunboats in the Naval Battle of Lake Borgne. On December 15 Purser Shields and Navy Surgeon Doctor R. Morrell were sent under a flag of truce by General Jackson to negotiate with Admiral Sir Alexander Cochrane the parole of prisoners of war and to attend to the wounded American sailors.

Shields and Morrell were placed on the hospital ship, Gorgon, but were not released until January 12 which was after the ensuing land battle in Chalmette, Louisiana. Nevertheless Purser Shields saw naval action on January 20 because he commanded a small group of armed sailing vessels sent to harass the retreating British barges on Lake Borgne.

Hancock County Sheriff Ricky Adam on Tuesday warned local residents about a scam in which someone is impersonating an officer on telephone calls trying to get people to part with their cash.

"It has been brought to our attention that someone is calling citizens stating that he is Chief Deputy Jeremy Skinner with the Hancock County Sheriff's Office calling on behalf of Sheriff Adam to 'collect payment of old fines,'" Adam said in a press release and on social media. "This is a scam."

BODEGA BSL 111 COURT STREET
Bodega in Old Town Bay St. Louis is a dream come true for residents and visitors alike. Conveniently located only a stone's throw from the Beach on Main and Court Streets, you'll find everything you need under one roof.

A November Hot Spot on Second Saturday, Bodega is a unique and inviting oasis to start your Old Town adventure. "When I first bought the building, I honestly had no idea how the many facets of the business would grow and unfold," said owner and developer, Kevin Jordan. "The one thing I did know is I wanted to create a place that would be like no other on the Coast."

And, his customers agree, he did just that. "It's the perfect place to relax and unwind," said a Bodega regular, Gloria Bernard of Coldwell Banker Alfonso Realty.

Today, Bodega is home to Bodega Adventures, Bodega Spirits and Liquor, Parrot Head Bar and Grill and Loft Yoga. First a bank, then offices to the City and the Hancock Chamber, the stately, historic building at 111 Court Street is conveniently located across from the City's Public Garage offering free parking.

As you enter Bodega, you almost expect to see Jimmy Buffet himself sitting at the bar as the sounds of bohemian music draws you in. Once inside, you'll feel right at home as you're greeted by a friendly staff who step up to serve you a cool beverage of your choice at the Parrot Head Bar and Restaurant. Chef Rickey Peters, a veteran restaurateur, is a star attraction at Bodega with tantalizing daily specials and specialty sandwiches, tapas offerings, sliders and a few sweet things. Locals have their favorites like the French dip, or home-made shrimp remoulade and chicken salad. But, no matter what you fancy, you'll find authentic New Orleans style cuisine for lunch and dinner right here at Bodega.

A new addition to Bodega is Bodega Spirits and Liquor. Tucked away under the palm trees on Court Street, it is a welcomed surprise, giving restaurants, visitors and locals a quick way to grab their favorite wine and spirits. And if they don't have what you want, just ask the manager Larry Main and he'll gladly make a special order just for you. The Loft on the second floor at Bodega is a welcomed retreat for yoga classes and private meetings and parties. The balcony overlooks Main Street with views of the Bay, offering guests a private setting in the heart of Old Town.

Whether you are an experienced yogi or attending your first class, the inclusive Loft community offers a warm and welcoming atmosphere with some of the top licensed instructors on the Coast providing guidance on strength, stamina, flexibility, balance, breathing, and awareness throughout your yoga journey for all levels. Single drop in classes start at $15 with advance reservations.

When planning your vacation to the area, look no further than the staff at Bodega. They can direct you to a sister business: GulfView Properties. Owned and managed by Jordan, they offer 11 premier vacation rentals in three prime locations: Bay Saint Louis, the New Orleans French Quarter, and Covington, Louisiana. And, once you've made it to the Bay, the staff will give you local tips on where to go and help you get there by renting you whatever you need to cruise in style from golf carts and bicycles to kayaks or paddle boards. "Simply put, Bodega has one goal in mind: to relax your mind, body, and spirit," said Jordan. "We would be honored if you stayed with us." Just call 228-363-1290 to get your adventure started. Resources help young people in mental health struggles

MS. BONNIE A. COBLENTZ
MSU EXTENSION SERVICE

The teen years have challenged every generation, but resources and concerned adults are available to help today’s young people avoid dangers, including suicide.

Alisha Hardman, assistant professor in the Mississippi State University School of Human Sciences, said mental health problems or crises are common and may impede teens’ positive development.

“One in five teens ages 13 to 18 experience severe mental health disorders each year,” said Hardman, who is also an MSU Extension Service family life specialist. “There may be other teens struggling with mental health problems who have not been diagnosed.”

Mental health problems often develop during adolescence, and half of all chronic mental illness begins by the age of 14.

“Given how common mental health problems are among young people, it is important to seek assistance for them and their families when they may be experiencing a mental health problem or crisis,” she said.

Signs and behaviors indicating a young person may be struggling with a mental health problem include a marked fall in school performance, severe worry or anxiety, marked changes in sleeping or eating habits, and extreme difficulties in concentrating.

Hardman cautioned that some of these signs are similar to changes that occur during typical adolescent development. It is important to consider signs collectively and determine if they represent a rapid change in the young person.

Other signs of trouble include prolonged depression and thoughts of death, severe mood swings, anxieties that get in the way of daily life, and repeated use of alcohol or drugs.

“Anything that interferes with a young person’s ability to ‘live, laugh, love or learn’ could indicate a teen is struggling with a mental health problem,” Hardman said.

The MSU Extension Service is helping address suicide risk and mental health challenges in Mississippi with the PROMISE initiative, a grant-funded, multilevel approach that brings together a variety of team players.

PROMISE stands for Preventing Opioid Misuse In the SouthEast. It is an initiative formed through a cooperative agreement between MSU Extension and the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration.

MSU Extension joined forces with the Mississippi Department of Mental Health’s StandUp MS campaign to help young people. Research indicates an increased incidence of prescription opioid misuse among rural youth, so efforts were made to train rural healthcare providers to implement prevention services for agricultural producers and their families through a partnership with AgriSafe.

A fundamental component of this phase was educating Extension agents and 4-H volunteers in mental health first aid. To date, 142 Extension agents have received this training, developed by the National Center for Behavioral Health and the Missouri Department of Mental Health.

This Mental Health First Aid program is designed to teach parents, family members, caregivers, teachers, school staff, peers, neighbors, and health and human services workers how to help adolescents who are in crisis or experiencing addictions or mental health challenges.

“Youth Mental Health First Aid is primarily designed for adults who regularly interact with young people,” Hardman said. “The course introduces common mental health challenges for youth, reviews typical adolescent development, and teaches a five-step action plan for how to help young people in both crisis and noncrisis situations.”

Anyone struggling with a mental health challenge is encouraged to contact the Mississippi Department of Mental Health Helpline at 877-210-8513. Anyone interested in receiving the Mental Health First Aid training should contact Mary Nelson Robertson at 662-325-3200.

To honor the efforts of the late Mayor Tommy Longo to rebuild Waveland after Hurricane Katrina, several Live Oak trees, planters and two 10 x 10 ft. pergolas will be constructed near the Ground Zero Museum in Waveland MS on Thursday, November 7, 2019.

Coastal Cleanup scheduled for Nov. 16

MR. ROBERT NATHAN GREGORY
MSU EXTENSION SERVICE

The Mississippi State University Extension Service invites volunteers to participate in the rescheduled 2019 annual Mississippi Coastal Cleanup Nov. 16.

Volunteers will remove litter from 30 sites across Hancock, Harrison and Jackson counties beginning at 8 a.m. A complimentary lunch will be provided after the cleanup ends at 11 a.m.

A site captain at each cleanup location will provide gloves, bags and other tools. Participants will collect data to categorize the major sources of marine debris entering the coastal environment. Site captains will present a ticket to each volunteer at the end of the cleanup for the lunch and a raffle drawing at the lunch location in each county.

Volunteers can sign up individually or as groups.

This will be the 31st year of the event, which was originally scheduled for late October and postponed due to rain.

During the 2018 cleanup, 2,649 volunteers joined the effort, covering 50 miles of coastline and filling 1,059 bags with 20,756 pounds of trash.

To volunteer, register online. MSU is an equal opportunity institution. For disability accommodation, contact Eric Sparks at 228-388-4710.
